

Garden in Transit

Bellevue pediatric patients are contributing their artistic talents to the city's public art project, "Garden in Transit." Their masterpieces and artwork from patients in other HHC facilities, will be displayed from September to December this year on yellow taxicabs that will carry their large, colorful flower decals as a traveling art exhibition. The project is being facilitated by the not-for-profit organization Portraits of Hope and is giving HHC patients a chance to experience the healing power of art. The project was created as part of the "Taxi 07" celebration of the 100th anniversary of New York's first metered taxi.
